

To My Family,

We are learning to practice the value of Silence, known as Sh'tikah in Hebrew. The Jewish people have always been taught that there are times when it is important be silent and times when it is important to speak.

When we are silent we hear what we may otherwise miss. When others are speaking, silence allows us to hear their words.

Below is an activity to help me form connections to the value.
A list of books is attached, so we can read together about the value of silence.

Please take notice when I am silent. Send this back to school so I can share with my teachers and classmates.

Cut and return to my classroom teacher.
